CHIEFTAIN

YEARBOOK STAFF

As the curtain starts its falling,
And we leave the stage of life,
May we glance back o'er the years,
Through the days of grief and strife,
To the days when we were happy
And our joys were manifold,
As we helped maintain the honor
Of our banner Blue and Gold

Unknown is our future
but onward we strive.

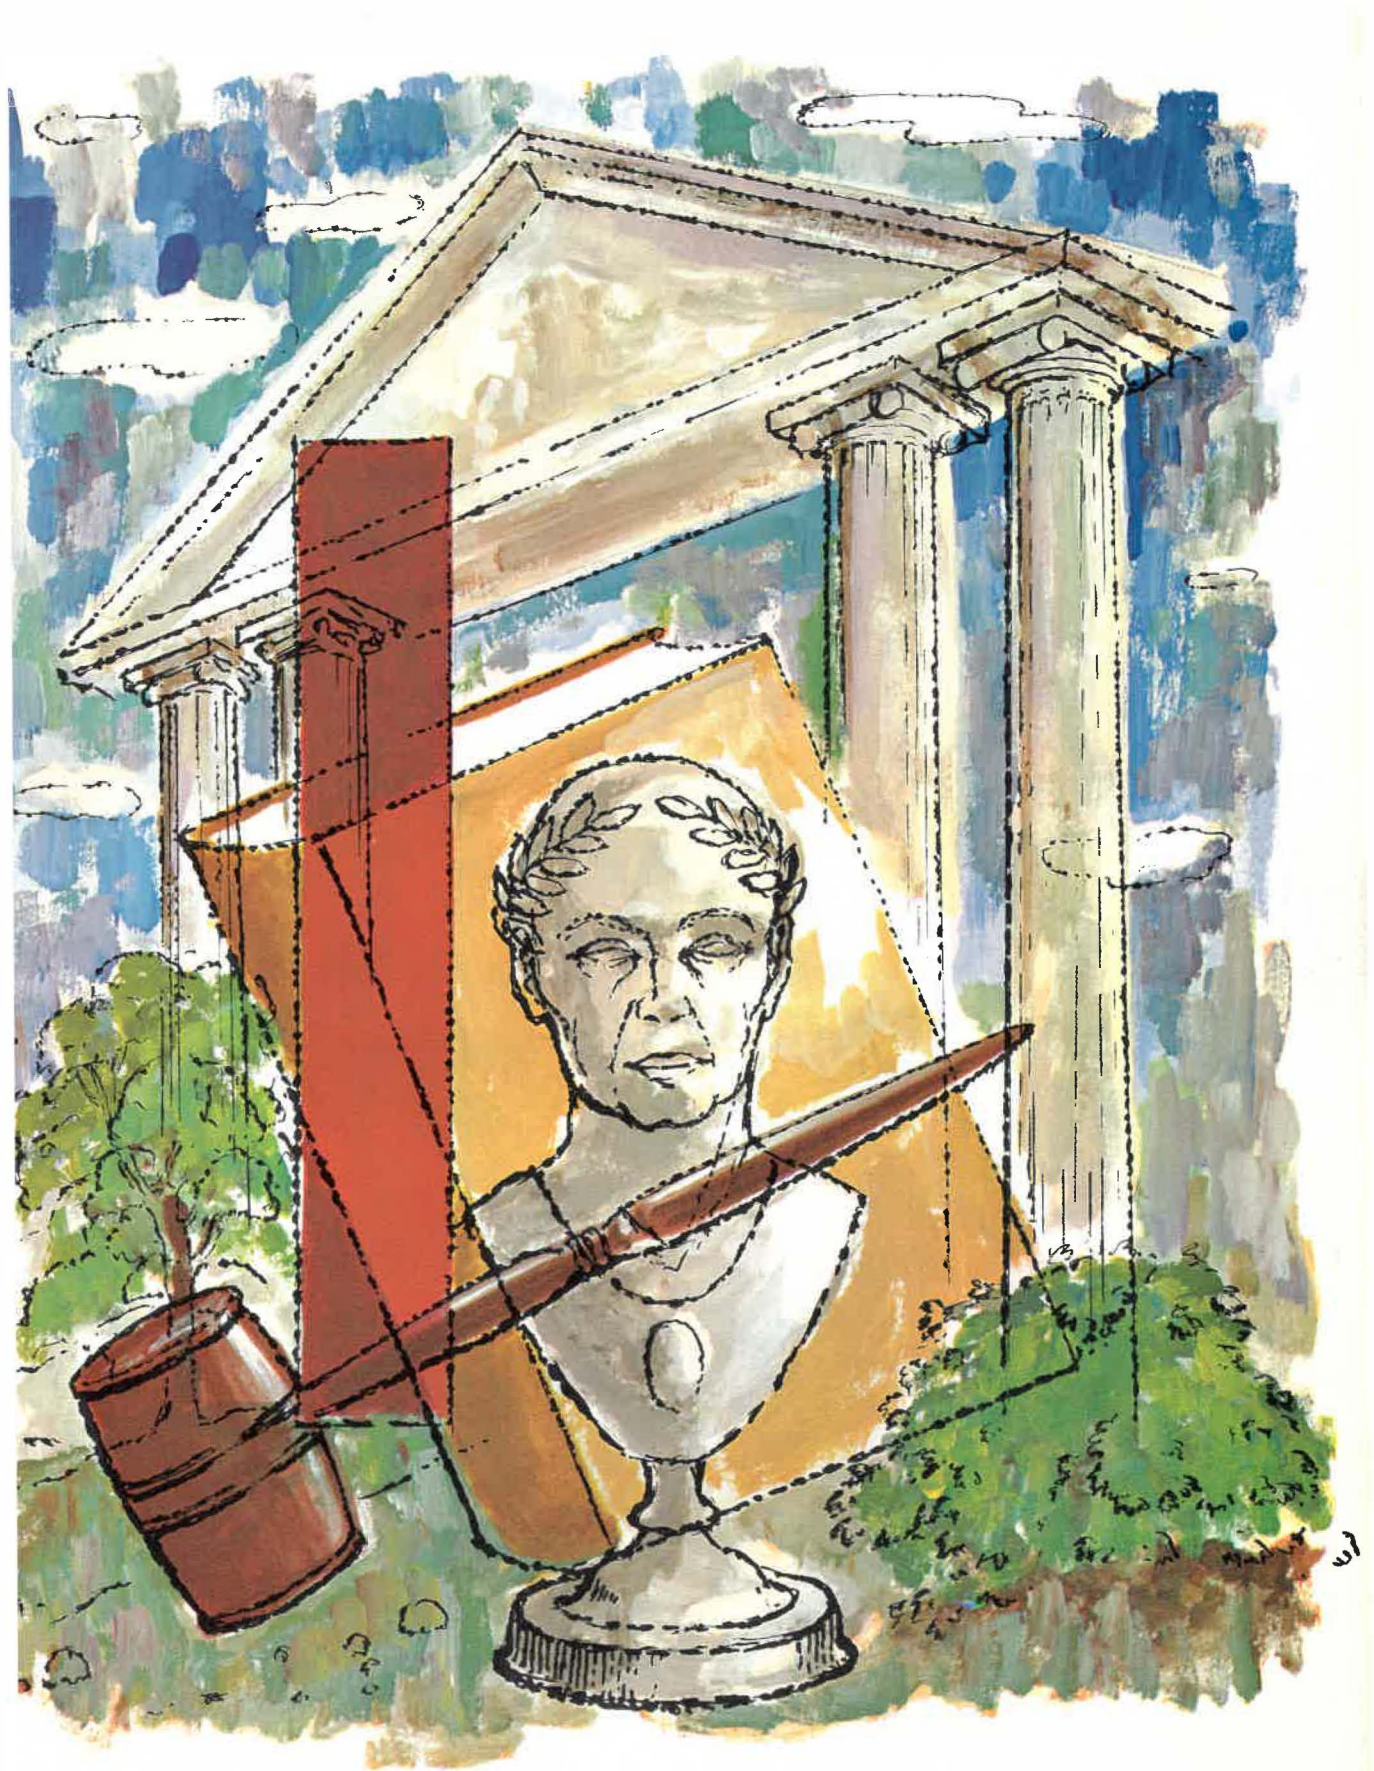

We, the class of 1967, dedicate our Yearbook to you: Mrs. Steka, Mr. Weisman, and Mr. Bea for what you have given us -- liberal portions of yourselves that will become an inseparable part of our constitutions and will manifest themselves in others as we unconsciously pass them along.

We thank-you, Mrs. Steka, for four years of being there, for remaining constant and steady and administering to us various necessary bits and pieces of worldly knowledge; we thank-you, Mr. Weisman, for your patience and your uninhibited companionship, your versatility of understanding coupled with an ever approachable ear, that let no one in need of counsel go away without ease; we thank-you, Mr. Bea, for your seeming immunity to shock, your even tempered degree of compatibility and above all, for your inexhaustible capacity for humor. For these things and others, we now in simultaneous departure and advent, thank-you, thank-you for having given us what you know of the wherewithal to realize life.

THESE WERE THE DAYS THAT WERE

When we first entered N.H.S. in 1963, it seemed as if our Senior year was as far away as the planet Pluto. So many things have happened during those years, that it makes our heads spin to think about it all. Time flies, and here we are to tell you about our past four year's experience.

Though the twenty-seven student Freshman class was a bit bewildered at first, we came through in great harmony. Our first year was spent under the guidance of President, Fred Dexter; Vice-President, Tetia Van Schoick; Secretary, Linda White; Treasurer, Mike Valenti; and Student Council Representative, Donna Nearing. Our first activity, a turkey dinner, was the biggest and best N.H.S. had ever seen. Due, in large part, to the encouragement of our advisors, Mrs. Stetka and Mr. Weisman, we broke all school records for class dinners.

The same officers we had in our Freshman year, we again elected in our Sophomore year, but with one minor change. Our Student Council Representative was Pete Lilholt. That year our first step into the limelight was a Halloween dance entitled "Graveyard Smash". We danced 'til twelve to the swinging band from New Jersey, The Versatones. Again, due to encouragement, we broke school records for class dances. Our second activity in our Sophomore year was a roast beef dinner. It proved to be very successful, but we could not break our own record. That year we were sad to have two of our classmates leave us; Janet Loffel, to be married, and Don Nelson, to join the Air Force.

Our Junior year was the busiest of all our high school years. Class officers were elected. President, Fred Dexter; Vice-President, Linda Nearing; Secretary, Lynda Esselman; Treasurer, Mike Valenti; and Student Council Representative, Pete Lilholt. Right away we ordered our class rings and before long we were proudly sporting them. Our first activity, a turkey dinner, was guided by our new advisor Mr. Bea and Mrs. Stetka. Later on in the year we were turned over to Mr. Scheuren who directed our Junior Play. The play, A FUEDIN' OVER YONDER, which included the entire class, was another one of our successes. Due to the excess of money, we decided we could go all out in putting on the Junior Prom -- "Oriental Gardens". Many hard hours of labor were spent but everyone had an enjoyable evening dancing to the music of Kittner's Band. The highlight of the night occurred at midnight when Tom Jay and Debbie Tegeler were crowned King and Queen of the 1966 Prom. We were also proud of classmates chosen for the National Honor Society that year. They were: Carolyn Bonhard, Linda De Mauro, Jeffrey Dexter, Lynda Esselman, Linda Nearing, Bob Lipay, Mike Valenti, Letitia Van Schoick, and Linda White.

At last our Senior year had come. Class officers were the same as in our Junior year. Carolyn Bonhard was elected Student Council Representative, since Pete Lilholt had been elected President of our Student Body. On October 19 we left for our long awaited high school highlight -- the Washington trip. Due to our previous successful activities we were the first class in some years which didn't have to put on an activity for the trip.

Through our past years, we have gained experience, friends, and a better understanding of life. Now we look to our last performance in N.H.S. -- graduation.

The afternoon brought the Washington Monument where Mr. Bea put us all to shame -- "I ran all the way." Freddie and Jerry did more than all right for themselves too, but Amy, in true passion, was smarter than anyone; she just couldn't see the sense of climbing all that way. The Parthenon behind us, we spent the rest of the afternoon browsing through the Smithsonian Institute and the buildings in that area.

For the last time we ate supper at the hotel (thank the Lord) and for the last night we embarked on our unceasing plot to drive the elevator operators crazy, as we descended from our suites and set sail for a night tour of Washington. We viewed the Jefferson Memorial and the Capitol in their night lights from the bus, and toured the Lincoln Memorial on foot, awed by marble and illumination and the spirit of Abe (so what if Dee did want to sit on his lap. That big bulooka attendant didn't have to say he'd bust her camera if she did.) From there we progressed to the Wax Museum (where we had a marvelous conversation with one of the mannequins) and to the National Archives. Really, Dave could have foregone that last tour of the airport, but -- however, everyone's nerves, especially the calm, tolerant bus drivers's, were much better after one of our crew (accidentally) set the bus slightly on fire.

We were faced with one last night in Washington, and everyone in desperation took one last fling, thanks to Mr. Bea who preyed upon Dave's better senses (what!) for an extension of the curfew. Back at the hotel, we sacked out in final rebellion of all consciousness, and except for Carolyn, who seemed a bit given to pilgrimages, and Herbie, who seemed a bit given to window sills, we slept.

Saturday morning brought farewell time, and everybody prowled about the Capitol saying good-bye and buying their last souvenirs and reveling in the lack of schedule for a whole morning. Just when everybody's stomach was finally oriented to the giddiness of the elevators and the wonderful reducing qualities of the food, they were sending us home to make room for a new batch. Ah, the elevator operators had even started to like us, too -- well that is until Carol leaned on the down buzzer for a full minute and a half as a farewell gesture.

We ate our last meal at the hotel, visited one last church, and left Washington. On the way home we stopped at Gettysburg, viewed the Cyclorama in the dome, and toured the battlegrounds on the bus, snapping our last frantic pictures. We ate dinner at the Holiday Inn and came on as far as Scranton, where we lost Dave into the same doorway he had first popped out of. After a snack and some telephone calls to parents in the diner where we had first eaten breakfast, we rolled on home, where there were cars and people waiting for us, and that was the end.

But like all fairy tales, the end is a lie, because nothing ever ends, and how could Herbie's maid in the lobby of the Wax Museum ever forget him -- "Hey, lady, you ever been to the Speakeasy?"

WE LEAVE

- Jerry Allen -- "I will my size 13 sneakers to Kay Hawker, and my ability to run the Triangle to Bruce Denny."
- Carolyn Bonhard -- "I will my seat on Bus 10 to Jay Powell, and my pleasant disposition to Linda Stewart, (who could use it.)"
- Lester Dailey -- "I will my ability to stay away from girls to Keith Wood, and my height to Carlton Sutliff."
- Robert Dailey -- "I will my ability in shop to Carl Fuchs."
- Linda De Mauro -- "I will all the first aid stations in the basketball league to Mr. Harrison in case an opportunity arises for him to use one. And I will my first period seat in study hall to Bruce who could use some time for studying."
- Fred Dexter -- "I will my spot at the ping pong table at noonhour to Terry Tenbus, and my Saturday nights in Honesdale to anyone!"
- Jeffery Dexter -- "I leave my natural Spanish accent to Mr. Bea, and my board stretcher to Mr. White."
- Herby Engelmann -- "I will my ability to get out at 1:25 to Billy Hawker, and my typing seat to anyone who's lucky enough to get it."
- Lynda Esselman -- "I will all my devilry to all business students so Mr. Hullihan will remember me."
- Dennis Hazard -- "I will my driving ability to Durwood, who needs it, and my Saturday nights in Honesdale to anyone who can handle them."
- Ronnie Kraack -- "I will my car to anyone who thinks they are man enough to drive it, and my curly hair to anyone who wants it."
- Jim La Barr -- "I will my ability to dribble to Bruce Denny, and my height to Bill Tegler."
- Pete Lilholt -- "I will all my good times and memories at N.H.S. to Mr. Bea, and the fun I had in Washington to Tom Fuller."

Linda White --

"Being in typical unsoundness of mind, I bequeath my affinity for bumping into trouble and wiggling out of it to Lindy Keesler, my ability to slay the language to Mr. Burke, my 999th unicorn with the strongest patch on it to Mr. White, and my distinguished position as leader of a one-member minority party in Honor Society to anybody fool enough to figure it a fit mantle."

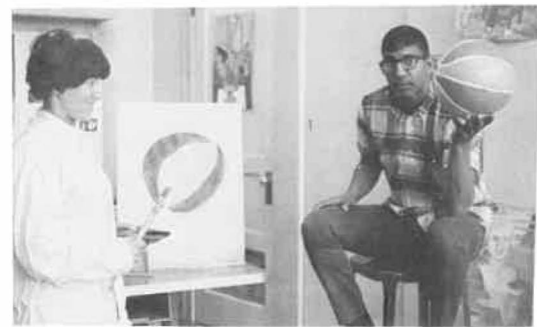

Barney Young --

"I will my 'chip' on my shoulder to anyone big enough to carry it."

NEWS

BULLITENS

- Allen Narrowsburg -- Jerry Allen, one time basketball star of the W.S.L., is spending his time yelling at the Narrowsburg Varsity as his team aims for the sectionals. Ohe, the good old days.
- Bonhard Washington D. C. -- Carolyn, a music major graduate from Adelphi, is now seen on the swing in the Speakeasy where she sings the blues.
- Dailey L. Niagra Falls -- After striving to become an electrician, Lester has been the cause of a nationwide blackout -- he got his electric guitar wires crossed.
- Dailey R. North Pole -- Robert, a full fledged carpenter is now employed by a folly sort of fellow repairing sleds and polishing noses in his spare time.
- De Mauro London -- America's most famous traveling hair stylist, Linda De Mauro, has discovered and patented a startling new concept in hair styling -- instant hair grower.
- Dexter F. Washington D.C. -- Reverend Frederick Dexter has just been named Chaplain of the United States Senate. The news was announced at the President's news conference this afternoon.
- Dexter J. Ponds of America -- Jeffery, as agricultural genius has devoted his life to his web-footed friends.
- Engleman Washington -- Herb has worked himself up to Postmaster General. He has put out a new 13¢ stamp featuring a famous Washington trademark -- The Speakeasy.
- Esselman New York City -- Essie, an executive secretary, has been heard to admit she is becoming bored with running around desks and not being caught. She might become a skydiver, working with her father.
- Hazard Washington D.C. -- Dennis, mint director in the Treasury Department, has put out a new coin in honor of his idol and likeness, Alfred E. Newman.
- Kraack Lake Huntington -- After devoting 2 years to the service of his country, Ron has decided to settle down and lead a normal (?) life. We always said, "Ron will be the first one."
- La Barr Harlem -- Jim, one time Class of '67' Wit, has become unique by replacing curly Neil (The Dribbler) of the Globetrotters.

Washington Trip

On October nineteenth, the best Wednesday of the year, the skies dripped a fine rain, and the pavement in front of old N. H. S. was shiny wet under the indefinite five o'clock lights. The seniors watched in silent disbelief, their feet walking the walk - yes, this was it, the hour had arrived, come sun or come rain or the fall of some last empire -- Washington, here we come!

Boarding the bus was no small undertaking, for Kinsey, as usual was slightly late, and Nancy and Wendy (will anybody ever really know what happened to them?) almost missed the entire proceedings, but when you're sitting on top of the world things always seem to equalize themselves. So it was that we hauled up anchor with the whole tribe aboard and ready for action.

After acquiring breakfast and Dave -- our guide, comedian, and portable father in Scranton, the bus rolled on to Philadelphia, where we toured Independence Hall, snapped pictures of the Liberty Bell, ate lunch, and ran through the undeniable downpour to buy umbrellas.

The rest of the trip to the Capitol was characterized by Jerry's records, tension, anticipation, sleep, and one humdinger of a crap game in which Dennis (naturally) won eleven dollars.

At 3:17 P.M. our bus nosed into Washington and by 3:25 P.M. it was incontrovertibly obvious to even the least observant personnel of the Hotel Annapolis that we had arrived. After everyone had checked into a room, the boys on the fourth floor and the girls on the sixth, (but God bless the fire escape, hey fellas?) the brave ventured out to buy postcards and case the town. Also about this time, the girls in room 623 were slightly shaken by Mike Valenti's brilliant impersonation -- "Hello, room 623? This is the man next door. Could you please refrain from disturbing the peace?"

At 5:00 P.M. we all dined in the perfectly dazzling hotel cafeteria and feasted on perfectly sumptuous victuals (if anyone thinks that's an exaggeration, they're right), after which we all split until quarter to eight, when Dave had managed to con a theater into receiving the class of '67 and permitting us all (that is all except Mrs. Stetka and Mr. Bea -- vive la Italiano, right, Mr. Bea?) to see FANTASTIC VOYAGE. After the movie it was again "to each his own", but Dennis will admit, if you ask him, that treating half the class to pizza is one sure-fire way to get rid of a fella's hard-won gamblin' money.

Curfew was at eleven-thirty SHARP, and the would-be excuses of the night's sweet rebellion were confined to a few capsulized antics like the I. F. T. (identified flying television) that unerringly sought Wendy's head, and Dennis's banishment from his sleeping quarters. Thursday morning at 6 o'clock SHARP we struggled up through layers of sleep, blinking our road-map-lined eyes at the bright (oh so bright) voice of the hotel's telephone lady, announcing with maddening lucidity that it was six o'clock.
